STAINED FLATIRON FOUND IN HOME OF WEALTHY WOMAN

ed to come in, there had been an accident. "Nellie," said Brennan, using the name by which every one in Stamford knew Mrs. Angie from her girlhood, "seemed to learn of the accident for the first time and, greatly excited, had me telephone the hospital. I told her Hallou was dead. She asked me if she could speak to me alone and I let her, warning her that anything she said might be used against her. She denied that she knew anything of the matter, or that she had been drinking, though I asked her.

"We found a white silk waist stained with blood on the neck and arms, a white petticoat similarly stained and a black skirt with red spots on the front. Nellie said she could explain this easily and did so in a way which seemed plausible. Then she produced an outfit of white which she said she had worn that night.

"Do you accuse me of this murder, William?" she asked me and I said: "No, but you must tell me the truth." "Can they put me in prison? Can they hang me?" she asked in terror. I told her I didn't know, but she must tell the truth.

Not until next morning, according to Brennan's testimony, did she admit that Hallou had called between 8 and 9 o'clock, that they had drunk together and that he had gone out and returned with a fresh supply of Hallou. She stuck to the story that Hallou left before the last liquor was drunk and that she heard him fall, and then carried him into the street.

The one point she wouldn't explain was the presence of Hallou's hat in her chest. She said he called Sunday and was taken with a weakness which I can't explain now. Then I put his hat away.

"But it's wet now," the Chief said he told her and Mrs. Angie refused to say anything else.

MRS. ANGIE TOO ILL TO AT-TEND INQUEST.

Before this testimony was taken the Coroner asked Judge Downs to produce Mrs. Angie.

Judge Downs presented a certificate of Dr. J. H. Staub, her physician, saying that her condition before the tragedy and after was such that an appearance in court would do her lasting injury.

Coroner Phelan took the question of requiring her presence under advisement, after taking a statement from Chief Brennan that she had talked with him, immediately after the police entered her apartment, with the utmost self-control, until he proved she was lying to him about her ignorance of Hallou's fate.

Leonard Blondell, Mrs. Angie's father, was busy to-day with new counsel he had secured for her—Judge Nichols C. Downs. Both heard Judge Downs are convinced that Mrs. Angie ought not to be forced to the witness stand at the continuation of the inquest before Coroner Phelan this afternoon. Coroner Phelan said that if she did not go on the stand he would be obliged to hold her for a court trial.

"The most that my daughter can be censured for," said Mr. Blondell to-day, "is for the indiscretion, in her fright and grief, of carrying Mr. Hallou to the street. But she had begun to prepare for bed. She is forty years old and a married woman. She knew the storm of gossip which would be raised if she called the police or other strangers under such circumstances. I believe that had I been in the city she would have called me instantly.

"The thought that she could in any way be responsible for an injury to my dear old friend and associate, Waldo Hallou, is absurd. I never had anything but the highest respect for him. I have always been proud of his admiration for Helen and glad of their friendship. He was old enough to be her father. She was old enough at that to choose her own friends and wisely.

SLEEPS FOR FIRST TIME SINCE TRAGEDY.

"Not only is my fortune to the last cent at the disposal of my daughter to prove her innocence of any responsibility for the death of Waldo Hallou, but I shall go farther and prove her innocence of the scandalous stories which are even now being invented, just as her intuition told her they would be. My daughter's name is blameless and those who do not respect it must be prepared to take serious consequences."

Mrs. Angie has been much encouraged by her father's presence. She slept for the first time last night since the tragedy. She had a good breakfast, and though she was still hysterical at times to-day she argued coherently that Hallou was her best and dearest friend, the only man for whom she had any regard except her father and that it was outrageous to charge her with any blame for his death. She begged her newspaper callers to try to persuade her lawyer to let her go on the stand and clear herself of all suspicion.

The police get persistent reports that Hallou, Mrs. Angie and a stranger were seen quarreling in an automobile Tuesday afternoon. No eyewitnesses of such a quarrel have been found. The time clock in the Yale and Towne works show that Hallou left the factory at five. At six he was at the office of the Varuna Spring Water Company and from that time until he went to call on Mrs. Angie at ten o'clock his every minute is accounted for. Chief Brennan does not believe there could have been an automobile ride between five and six which was not seen by the hundreds of people about the city hall who knew both the Councilman and Mrs. Angie well.

The body of Hallou was sent to his birthplace, Winchendon, Mass., to-day for burial. There were no services here.

MISSOURIANS BACK WILSON.

WASHINGTON, June 25.—Support for President Wilson's legislative programme was given to-day by the entire Missouri delegation in the House, headed by Speaker Champ Clark. A letter from the Missouri representatives expressing loyalty "in the struggle you are making to carry out our remaining platform pledges to the people," was presented to Mr. Wilson. In reply the President addressed a letter to the speaker and his colleagues thanking them for their support.

FAVOR STOCK EXCHANGE BILL

Senate Banking Committee to Report Measure.

WASHINGTON, June 25.—Senator Owen's bill for Federal regulation of stock exchanges was ordered favorably reported to-day by the Banking Committee. Senator Owen reported the bill to the Senate without comment. Members of the committee not at the meeting were surprised at to-day's action. There was a general impression the meeting had been called to take up nominations for the Federal reserve board. They were only incidentally discussed.

This Is Babies' Week

It is a time when the various factors directly interested in infant welfare work are getting together to create a great wave of sentiment that will result in giving the little ones a better chance.

WE are on the threshold of Summer. The season that takes an awful toll of infant life.

That this toll is less in New York City than in any other great town on earth speaks wonders for the work that has been done here.

But the mortality rate is still too high for this enlightened community.

The workers are starting out to cut the rate in half, and if they succeed it will mean thousands of lives saved.

Our part of this work has been going on for over a half a century.

Starting at a time when milk conditions were notoriously wretched, when adulteration and the use of preservatives were generally practised, it has been a glorious privilege to lead the movement which has given New York the best milk supply in the world.

From the day when Borden's began to supply clean, wholesome, fresh, country bottled milk, the doom of fraudulent, dangerous milk was sealed.

It has been a long fight and there is still much to be done, but those who know the milk business for twenty years back can tell of the enormous things that have been accomplished since Borden's made it possible for all who wanted good milk to have a pure product.

We speak of ourselves and our association with this movement not in a boastful spirit but simply to record a fact and to publicly acknowledge the sense of responsibility we feel to the two million or more people who depend on us for their daily milk.

We know what we have done. We know that the future offers opportunities as great as those which have confronted us for the past sixty years.

Our organization, noted for its ideals and its efficiency, as well as for its size, has ever had for its aim the welfare of its clientele of consumers.

It has worked night and day, every day, that the babies might have better milk.

That this work has been attended with success is a notable part of the history of the milk trade.

That the public knows and appreciates this is shown by the tremendous support given by the consumers, resulting in the greatest milk business on earth and, according to our lights, the most dependable.

Our attitude toward the responsibilities imposed by this work is one of humility. The attitude that keeps every loyal Borden man keyed up to his best to be sure that the bottle of milk that reaches your door shall be right.

An attitude that keeps us always trying and advancing.

During the past year we have introduced

PASTEURIZED

The sale of this grade has reached a point which justifies our faith in it.

We Recommend It for the Babies and Sell It at a Price That Makes It Available for the Whole Family.
